

Collision Risk

Marine renewable energy devices have many different parts. Some of them, like the rotating blades of tidal turbines, could hurt marine animals if they collide with the slow-moving turbine blades by swimming too close to the device. However, some studies show that marine animals are able to see and/or hear a device and avoid it, even from far away. Also, no scientists have ever seen a collision!

