

Social and Economic Impacts

Although social and economic effects of marine energy development are not environmentally related, they must be considered in the planning process. These effects include, among others, potential impacts on communities, employment, infrastructure and services, and regional commerce.

